Law of Newspapers.

1. Anyone who takes a paper regularly from the post-office, whether directed to his name or another's, whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the payment.
2. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.
3. If any subscribers order the discontinuance of their newspapers, the publisher may continue to send them until all arrearages are paid.
4. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their newspapers from the office to which they are directed, the publisher holds them responsible until they have settled their bills and order them discontinued.
5. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the newspapers are sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.
6. The courts have decided that refusing to take a paper from the office, or removing and leaving it uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.
7. The postmaster who neglects to give the legal notice of the neglect of a person to take from the office the newspapers addressed to him, is liable to the publisher for the subscription price.

Grant finding the contest waxing hot in his own party over the nomination of a successor to Hayes, has so far thrown off the mask as to reveal his great anxiety for a renomination, and like an industrious tumble-bug is rolling his ball in the south, but since the organization of a National anti-third term party, which will convene in St. Louis on the 6th day of May next, he has become palid with despair. The anti-thirders mean business and set forth in their call, that in no event will they prove recreant to the precedent established by Washington and patriotically adhered to by his successors in office, which they consider founded upon the wisest consideration of public policy. They also approvingly quote Jefferson's language that, "if some termination to the services of the chief magistrate be not fixed by the constitution or supplied by practice, his office, nominally for years, will, in fact, become for life." The Republican doctrine, as adopted by that party in the State Convention of Pennsylvania (1875) is re-produced, as also by the Republican State Conventions of New York and Ohio, which were also equally emphatic in their declarations against a third occupancy of the executive chair and all pronounce a second incumbency as an ultimatum in the unwritten law of the Republic. A Republican Congress, in 1875, by resolution, coincided in the precedent established by Washington and adhered to by other Presidents, in retiring from the Presidential office after their second term. The "Call" also declares that the re-nomination of Grant would result in the overwhelming defeat of the Republican party. The Republican anti-third termers propose to vitalize the principle of a limited term in the executive office by the defeat of Grant in convention, and if nominated at the ballot-box. From the present outlook, Blaine seems to be the coming man, out, who can tell what a combination may not do to thwart a political adversary who has fought the good fight and is almost within reach of the goal of his ambition.

Sherman has repeatedly declared that he would not be a candidate before the Chicago Convention unless he had the united vote of Ohio.

The tenth President of the United States was not an aspirant for the position and had not been mentioned as a possible candidate until after the convention was weary of voting, and may it not so prove in the coming Republican Convention, that an unarmed candidate may be put forward to contest the honors at the polls with a Democratic nominee. The favor and rivalry of candidates renders it probable.

We are pleased to know that R. F. Straine is again in the charge of the Boston Economist. Mr. S. is a live newspaper man, has been in Globe district and has had ocular proof of its capabilities as a gold and silver mining section.

An Expert's Opinion of Globe.

GLOBE CITY, }
April 10, 1880. }

EDITOR BELT:—A visit of ten days in your vicinity has enabled me to look into many of the mines of this and Mineral Creek district, and examine the facilities for working them. I had, in common with others, been prejudiced against the mines in this locality by letters from unscrupulous parties, and my expectations as to the permanence and value of your mines were not great. I have carefully sampled and assayed some of those most opened and find them very valuable, able to insure a large output of ore, easily worked and in no way refractory. The ores from the mines in Richmond Basin and vicinity are especially high grade and docile and will yield a high percentage of their assay value by raw amalgamation. The Silver Nugget has large amounts of ore already out and much in place in sight, and is a large and true fissure. I regard it as one of the most remarkable of the many phenomenal mines of your Territory and it will doubtless handsomely reward its worthy and adventurous discoverer, when the machinery now on the ground shall have been started.

The Buckeye is a large and valuable mine showing a strong and true vein at its greatest depth (235 feet) and will give a good account of itself under proper management.

The Mack Morris looks splendidly from the surface showing and seems ably taken care of by its intelligent foreman Mr. Cassidy.

The Borell, near the Silver Nugget mill is opened to a depth of fifty feet, and its ores are identical with the carbonates at Leadville and the rich float showing horn silver indicates very rich deposits when explorations shall have been systematically made. The iron cap and porphyry are identical with the rich carbonate deposits of Colorado, and when the galenas present in several mines in this vicinity are associated with them, a smelter will soon pour out its wealth in a continuous stream.

The Irene has a splendid showing and when its mill on which no expense has been spared is running, it will under its energetic manager, gladden its stockholders with steady and increasing dividends.

The mines of Mineral Creek are large and true contact veins in most reliable formation traceable for great distances on the surface and where opened, show remarkable regularity and permanence. They are exceptionally well situated as far as wood and water are concerned and the ores are especially easily worked and though of lower grade than those of this locality will amply repay any reasonable outlay. I am entirely confident that Globe will soon prove the truth of the adage that "there is nothing so successful as success."

Very truly yours &c.

J. G. COOPER.

Locators of mines should be particular to comply with the following section (2324) of the Revised U. S. Statutes, to which our attention has been directed by John Wasson U. S. Surveyor-General of Arizona, who cites us to J. A. Williamson's, Commissioner letter upon the subject which is also herewith published for general information:

"The miners of each mining district may make regulations not in conflict with the laws of the United States, or the laws of the State or Territory in which the district is situated, governing the location, manner of recording, amount of work necessary to hold possession of a mining claim, subject to the following requirements: The location must be distinctly marked on the ground so that its boundaries can be readily traced. All records of mining claims hereafter made shall contain the name or names of the locators, the date of the location, and such a description of the claim or claims located by reference to some natural object or permanent monument as will identify the claim." WASHINGTON, D. C., March 23, 1880. John Wasson, Surveyor-General, A. T. Mineral locations made since May tenth, seventy-two, not complying with section twenty-three hundred twenty-four, Revised Statutes, require proper relocation and record before survey for patent. Locations described insufficient.

J. A. WILLIAMSON, Commissioner.

The General Land Office does not hold a defective record of location as insufficient to hold possession of a mining claim, but distinctly avers that such record notices do not entitle claimants under them to surveys for patents to claims located since May 10, 1872.

Harrison & Barnes motion for new trial in the Champion mine case was denied.
